WEST VIRGINIA, August 26, 1868. GENERAL: Full of solicitude for the future of our country, I come, with my heart in my hand, o learn the condition, wishes and intention of the people of the Southern States-especially to ascertain the sentiments of that body of grave, energetic, self-sacrificing men, who, after sustaining the Confederacy for four years, laid down their arms and swore allegiance to the Government of the United States, whose trusted and beloved leader you have been.

I see that interpreting "States' rights" to con flict with national unity has produced a violent reaction against them, which is drifting us towards consolidation; and, also, that so great a country as ours even now is, certainly is to be. must have State governments to attend to local details, or go farther and fare worse.

> influences exerted to stir up the passions of the negroes, the ralations of the two races would soon adjust themselves on a basis of mutual kindness and advantage. It is true that the people of the South, together with the people of the North and West, are, for obvious reasons, opposed to any system of laws which will place the political power of the coanqualifications which are necessary to make them safe depositories of political power. They would inevitably become the victims of demagogues who, for selfish purposes, would mislead them, to the serious injury of the public.

The great wart of the South is peace. The people earnestly desire tranquility and the restoration of the Union. They deprecate disorder and excitement as the most serious obstacles to their prosperity. They ask a restoration of their rights under the Constitution. They desire relief from oppressive misrule. Above all, they would appeal to their countrymen for the re-establishment in the Southern States of that which has justly been regarded as the birthright of every Americanthe right of self-government. Establish these on a firm basis, and we can safely promise on behalf of the Southern people that they will faithfully obey the Constitution and laws of the United States, treat the negro with kindness and humanity, and fulfil every duty incumbent on peaceful citizens loyal to the Constitution of their country. We believe the above contains a succinct reply to the general topics embraced in your letter, and we venture to say on behalf of the Southern people and of the officers and soldiers of the late Confederate army that they will concur in all the roe. sentiments which we have expressed.
